ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I would like to thank the British Library for their kind permission to reproduce the material from manuscript Sloane MS 3821 which forms the basis of this book.

I would also like to thank Rosa Laguna for the beautiful cover image of Nakhriel based on our work with him using the conjuration in this book.

INTRODUCTION

THE PLANETARY INTELLIGENCES (or Angels) first appear in Cornelius Agrippa's Three Books of Occult Philosophy, published in 1531-3, though he drafted it around 1508-9. Heinrich Cornelius Agrippa von Nettesheim (1486-1535) was taught by the extremely important magical Abbot Johannes Trithemius (1462-1516), who may have been his source for them. It seems unlikely that Agrippa made up the Planetary Intelligences, but their origins prior to him remain a mystery at present.

From Agrippa onwards, the Planetary Intelligences have usually been associated with talismanic work. The series of conjurations presented in Sloane 3821 (and partially in Sloane 3825) indicate that they were also conjured in the manner of angels and demons. The style of the conjurations is identical in these manuscripts for a variety of other spiritual creatures including archangels, demons, demon princes and Enochian spirits. This suggests a single corpus of work which transcended classifications and worked rather with spiritual creatures as a spectrum of possible non-physical contacts. I have discussed the ownership of these manuscripts, and who was likely to have practiced from them, elsewhere.¹

The mention of Euclid of Megara, the “father of geometry” in connection with the kameas or magic number squares is interesting, but not entirely surprising. Euclid was a popular figure amongst Renaissance magicians, with Dr John Dee giving his first public lecture on Euclid and contributing a preface to the first English edition of Euclid's work in 1570, and Thomas Rudd also publishing Euclid including Dee's preface. Euclid of Thebes (a separate figure who may have been conflated or confused with Euclid of Megara) was mentioned in the Sworn Book of Honorius as the father of Honorius. This is significant in that the Sworn Book of Honorius is the blueprint grimoire of planetary angelic magic.

NOTE ON PRACTICE: Stating the obvious, if you perform any of these conjurations they should of course be performed on their appropriate planetary day, preferably starting the conjuration at the beginning of the planetary hour. Several repetitions of the conjuration may be required, and a suitable magic circle should be employed.²

CONTENT & PROVENANCE

The material is found in full in Sloane 3821 at fo.206v-225, which is the primary source text in this work due to its complete nature.

Sloane 3825 (fo. 192-194) has the Agiel conjuration only, squeezed in between Janua Magica Reserata and the Lemegeton.

The following abbreviations are used in the footnotes to distinguish between textual differences between different manuscripts:

S1: Sloane 3821

S2: Sloane 3825

NOTES ON STYLE USED WITHIN THE MANUSCRIPTS

Abbreviations & Contractions

The abbreviation “C.S. or G.R.” has been expanded to “Crystal Stone or Glass Receptacle”.

Capitalisation & Punctuation

Capitalisation and punctuation have been reproduced faithfully from the manuscripts, even where they seem curious. Likewise “&”, which is used frequently through the manuscript has been maintained, as has “&c” for “etcetera”.

Paragraphs

Paragraph structure has also been kept to the original form, resulting in some very long paragraphs that I decided to preserve to maintain the flavour of the original.

Style

In general the style of the manuscript has been rationalised to modern English. That is to say words like “soe” and “doe” have been reproduced as “so” and “do”, and “Angell” as “Angel”.

The grammar of the manuscript is reproduced faithfully, and no attempt has been made to render the form into modern English, the text being sufficiently clear in its original form as not to warrant such alterations.

Where the text has been bolded this is to indicate red lettering in the original manuscript.

APPENDIX 1 – SHAPES OF SPIRITS

The Fourth Book of Occult Philosophy, which may have been written in part by Cornelius Agrippa (opinions on this differ) includes a section on the shapes of the familiar spirits of the planets, included here for examples of possible forms in which the Planetary Intelligences may appear. It should be noted that this list is not specifically about the Intelligences and so is here as a guide. For example during a conjuration of Nakhiel he appeared as a large black panther with golden wings like lightning and fiery eyes, as illustrated on the cover of this work.

The Sun	A King with a sceptre riding on a lion, a crowned King, a Queen with a sceptre, a bird, a lion, a cock, a yellow or golden garment and a sceptre.
Mercury	Classic Mercurial symbols such as the fair youth (Hermes or Mercury), the magpie and a robe of changeable colours. Other manifestations described are a King riding upon a bear, a woman holding a distaff, a dog, a she-bear, a rod and a little staff
Venus	Images of the beautifully dressed and clothed maid (Venus), A King with a sceptre riding upon a camel, a She-Goat, Camel or Dove. Flowers and garments in the colours white or green are also often cited.
The Moon	Classical image of a female huntress with a bow and arrows (Artemis/Diana), as well as the arrow itself and the colour silver. Lunar spirits may also appear as a King riding on a Doe, a little boy, a cow, a little doe, a goose, a creature with many feet or in the form of green or silver coloured garments.
Mars	Includes symbols such as weapons, the wolf and the colour red. Spirits associated with Mars may also appear as an armed King riding upon a wolf, an armed man, a woman holding a buckler on her thigh, a goat, a horse, a stag, wool or as red garments.
Jupiter	A man wearing a mitre in a long robe, a maid with a laurel crown, adorned with flowers, a bull, stag or peacock. It may also manifest as a sword, a box tree or as an azure coloured garment.

Saturn	Includes a King with a beard seen riding on a Dragon, an old man with a beard, an old woman leaning on a staff, a hog, a Dragon, an owl, a black garment, a hook or sickle or as a Juniper tree.

2 An example of such is given in the author's Practical Planetary Magic, 2007:136-7.

3 Euclid – the “father of geometry”, who lived mid 4th – mid 3rd century BCE.

4 The flavour of this paragraph is suggestive of the Christian Neoplatonism of Marisilio Ficino (1433-1499) and could indicate the author had studied Ficino's works, which were influential and accessible.

20 S2: The text ends at the foot of this page. From the style it is clear that this is the first of seven invocations to the planetary spirits. The rest of this invocation and the other six invocations are not reproduced in the text of Sloane 3825, which has been bound with a copy of The Lesser Key of Solomon following on for the remaining folios. However the seven invocations make up the last 20 pages of Sloane 3821 (ff 205-225).

21 S1: “called” (Latin).

22 Divine names associated with the Jupiter kamea are Ab, El, Aba, so Abab is probably a transcription error.

23 S1: “your” is repeated here.

24 S1: “up” is repeated here.

25 S1: “orders” is repeated here.

26 Divine names given for the Mercury kamea.

27 S1: “Move” is repeated here.
